patter Powers for the Proposed Irish Leg-islature and a Larger Representation of Ireland in the Imperial Parliament,

LONDON, Oct. 23.-Mr. Gladstone has revised his Home Rule bill. Matured during a long period of consideration by himself, and discussed in detail by probable members of the next Liberal Ministry, the measure has now sumed such definite form as to enable Mr. Gladstone at any moment to place it before the country. Earl Spencer, Mr. Morley, and Sir William Vernon Harcourt have aided him in shaping the political features, while Lord Herschell especially attended to the legal and onstitutional form of the scheme.

Lord Rosebery, though continually advised as to the progress of the bill, tacitly declined assist or interfere until recently, when he was informed that he must define his attitude toward the project of the Liberal leaders. He then consented to confer on the matter. Sin William Vernon Harcourt and Mr. Morley accordingly visited Lord Rosebery at Mentmore his week and obtained his adhesion to the project. Had he refused his assistance, the services of some other poer must have been

When the scheme in detail will be divulged depends upon the fate and character of the Government's Irish local government meas-Government's Irish local government measure; but the fact that the scheme has been perfected and is expected to be announced by Mr. Moriey next week will deprive the Unionists of their stock argument that Mr. Gladstone has no definite idea of what the bill will be and that his colleagues throughout the country, relying upon him, would take a leap in the dark. It dissolution came now, the measure would be rublished with such completeness as would leave the Conservatives no chance to say that the country had been deceived on any important point.

When the general election does come the issue will be fought on definitely declared home rule lines. If the popular vote places Mr. Gladstone in power, the course thus adopted will paralyze the opposition. The House of Lords will not dare to reject the bill on the ground that the vote of the electorate had not been especially taken thereon.

Regarding the principles of the new measure, enough has been officially ascertained to enable one to state that it gives the proposed Irish Legislature fuller powers than did the hill of 1885. It retains the lower and upper Houses of the Irish Parliament, vests the appointment of the judiciary in the Irish Executive and maintains a larger representation of Ireland in the Imperial Parliament. The complete questions of financial relations and the control of the police are also settled. are: but the fact that the scheme has bee

TO CRIPPLE TORPEDO BOATS. Testing a Protected Boom Invented by th British Naval Committee.

LONDON, Oct. 23.-Experiments were made in a creek in Portsmouth harbor yesterday with a protected boom invented by the Naval Committee. The boom consisted of six wooder baulks, one foot square and forty feet long, arspaces between the beams were too narrow to permit a torpedo vessel to pass through. The obstacle was solidified by ten steel hawsers intertwined among the beams and tauty attached to barges on either side. To prevent the innect of a torpedo boat from dipping the boom and enabling it to glide over, another six-inch hawser was suspended six feet above the boom. The beams were armed with steel points and powerful spikes shaped like builts horns. One of the swittest torpedo boats in the British navy, the one lately commanded by Prince George, was selected to attempt to pass the boom. The torpedo boat was encased in a superstructure rising in the centre and sloping toward the extremities in order to carry the elevated hawser over the hull and prevent the smashing of the funnel and torpedo gear. The funnel was constructed so as to fall back if struck.

A host of Admiralty officials and naval officers were present to witness the experiments. The torpielo loat selected, carrying a Lieutenant and four seamen, whose lives were insured by the Admiralty, dashed forward at the speed of fourteen knots an hour, striking the boom in the centre. The boat mounted the first lence, smashing the boat mounted with the overhead hawer and stopped the bat. Even then the boat could have discharged torpedees, but she was fatally crippled and remained fixed to the heam. The bow compartments filled with water, the boat having impinged upon the fron hors, and the bottom of the starboard side was ripped open. The engines, being revorsed, freed the boat, and it rolled over on its starboard side. The crew then abandoned her, and she soon sank.

GREAT BRITAIN AND THE FAIR. Report of the Commissioners Sent to Make Inquiries in Chicago.

LONDON, Oct. 23.-The elaborate report of Sir Henry Wood and Mr. James Dredge, the British Commissioners who recently returned to this city after visiting Chicago and making inquiries in regard to the steps which Great Britain could and might take in making a suitable exhibit at the Columbian Fair of 1803, was published to-day. The report was presented to the Royal Commission on Wednesday last. Sir Richard Webster, the Attorney-General, presided at the meeting, at which Sir Philip Cunliffe-Owen, Sir Frederick Abeel, Sir George Birdwood, and other members of the Commission were present. The report consists of fifteen printed pages, to which are attached an appendix and several maps. It carefully reviews each step taken by the Commissioners in the United States, and is full of statistics as to space, transportation, &c.

The report recommends the erection of a handsome building on the site provided for the juries intrusted with the task of making containing foreign exhibits. The report also commends the courtesy of President Harrison and Secretary Foster and of all the Exposi-tion officials whom the British Commissioners and Secretary Foster and of all the Exposition officials whom the British Commissioners met, and who, they say, granted all the requests made on behalf of Great Britain.

The British Commissioners, it appears, were much impressed with the manner in which the work at Chicago has been undertaken, and they say that there is no doubt whatever of the ultimate success of the Fair. They add: "We also believe that our visit was of some assistance to the Executive, as it was a part of our duty to place all the information which the other exhibitions had given us fully and wholly at his disposal."

Referring to the designs for the Fair, the Commissioners say: "Bo far as we could judge, great skill and boldness characterize the general engineering designs, which have all been prepared by the construction department." Touching upon the question of decoration, they state that "It is gratifying to record that the important work of decoration is controlled by an Englishman, Mr. Pretyman."

As to local transportation the report asserts: "There is no doubt that the problem involving the transportation of passengers from the city to the Exhibition will be successfully solved. The question of railways within the grounds is a very serious one. The authorities have made many arrangements in this direction, but it will be difficult to provide too liberally for the easy circulation of visitors within the vast enclosure."

After the report had been read the Commission thanked Sir Henry Wood and Mr. James Dredge for the work they had accomplished in behalf of the Boyal Commission. The Commission also decided to appoint a committee of indies to correspond with and to act in conjunction with the Ladles' Commission decided to invite the Chambers of Commerce to act as local commission also decided to appoint a committee of chiego, Finally the Commission decided to invite the Chambers of Commission decided t

At a meeting of the Trinity Baptist Church 141 East Fifty-fifth street, last night, Deacon Archelaus A. Now, if I were to go to somebody else and tell mean stories about you, that would be tattling. But if I went right up and told you to your face that you were a mean, worthless follow, that would be biting. Everybody knows what railling is.

"The meeting was, very harmonious," continued the pastor. Mr. Colby was unanimously expelled—excluded, excluded from the church fellowship. No, he was not here. Nobody appeared for him. Did anybody speak in his behalf? Oh, nol nol nol It was quite unanimous. There was no discussion. Yes, there were speeches—talks, yes, little talks, but not for him. Oh, no! And they wore all short. Deacon Stetson was telling the reporters that "there was no acrimonious discussion," when young Dr. Hassinger leaned over the pulpit and, shaking his forefinger in front of him, cried: "Say, what are you giving this thing away to these reporters for?" Deacon Stetson smiled.

"Yes," said Mr. Hudson, later, "if a man should inspire newspaper stories about Chinese Sunday schools, which, perhaps, reflected on the Sunday school, that would surely be backbiting. But this meeting was quite unanimous, quite harmonious."

"No." said Deacon Barton, "the Chinese Sunday school stories did not cause this action at all. This man has been tattling around for a year. He has had the church by the ears. You see, he is a tattling, babbling old woman."

Mr. Colly lives at 213 East Thirty-sixth street. Last night his wife came to the door and wanted to know if there were any more reporters in town, and why they were not there. AMUSEMENTS.

The Brothers Granfild.

First in the field this season as musical covelties appear the brothers Alfred and Heinrich Grunfeld, artists of world-wide renown, virtuosos of the planeforte and of the violoncello. They come, their social achievements and art exploits heralded with loud acclamstions, the story of their successes before many crowned heads of Europe and in the circles of the nobility set forth in glowing colors.

Their performances last evening on the oclittle hall of Madison Square Garden proved their right to hold the claims they made upon public appreciation. Of the two, the planist is, undoubtedly, the more talented and brilliant artist, and is thus entitled is, undoubtedly, the more talented and brilliant artist, and is thus entitled to first discussion. He adds another name to the long list of magnificently equipped masters of that most friendly of instruments, which, since Thalberg's time, has stretched along our musical horizon in a vast procession. Such is the immense height of the standard which is now insisted upon in playing, that should even Liszt or Tausig arise from their tombs to exhibit their transcendent powers, they could hardly satisfy and surely not in any degree surprise us. To be accepted by an audience of this time with any show of favor is proof of extraordinary ability on the part of an artist. Both Granfelds were generously received and enthusiastically applicated by a large audience last night though, as has been said, judgment spoke strongest for admiration of Alfred. At the very first, in a Beethoven sonata, for plane and collo he made plain the facts, first, that he has an exquisite sense of proportion in phrasing and expression; second, that he is willing to subordinate mere technique, with which he is superabundantly endowed, to the strict meaning of the composition. These two attributes are most valuable and worthy onea. Afterthe discoveryof these came other excellences trooping along rapidly. Grunfeld's management of the pedals is extraordinarily fine—his scales even and sparkling, his daring in making long leaps and dashes from one end to the other of the piano almost feats of legerdemain. And throughout all is felt a geolal and animated musical nature. Perhaps the three most feats of legerdemain, And throughout all is felt a geolal and animated musical nature. He played gracefully a number of pleasing things, chief among which may reckoned "La Cling-Antaine" by Gabriel-Marie, Moszkowski's "Guitarre," and a plquante morean by Popper. IN LOVE. The old story—with variations.

Yes," she said, blushing prettily, "I am in love. I am in love with Fairbank's Gold Dust Washing Powder. It is one of the most perfect of the many excellent products of the nineteenth century. It is as valuable to me as an extra pair of arms would be, for it reduces the work of cleaning fully one-half. Moreover the results are better than with any other preparation I have ever used, and I have tried a great number.

Yes, for a true and steady lover, one that I can always rely on, and that is ever at hand, ready to help me, give me Fairbank's Gold Dust Washing Powder.
